NEWS JOTTINGS OF SALEM CITY

SALEM, Jan. 26—Charles C. Wilson, D. O. S., the local optical dealer located on Main street, has patented an eye board or heat protector and has had a number of them manufactured and is planning to put them on the market. The eye protector is used by workers who work before furnaces of great heat and light, and the protector shields the eye from the heat and light. The board is made from neoboston, in which is attached two circular pieces of similar material revolving on a pin. In these circular pieces are set three different colored pieces of glass—blue, amber and natural glass, that when the wheels are turned the glass fits the eye-holes in the board, and the worker can select the color glass he may prefer. The protector is carried by hanging from the neck, and is held in place before the face by the worker taking a rubber on the back of the board or protector in his mouth. When necessary to release the board, it drops down over the wearer's breast until needed again. The new invention appears to a layman to have merit and will be demanded and used by glass workers and furnace men in great numbers.

The Sunday edition of the Telegram with its woman's suffrage section was in great demand here, especially by some of the local suffragists who are sending it to various parts of the state. The Telegram management has been complimented often for his recent effort.

Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Williams, of Gaston, are here for a few days guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Gain.

Mr. Williams, while not in rugged health, is taking treatment from a city physician.

Miss Maggie W. Davis, a professional nurse from Clarksburg, spent Monday night with her sister, Mrs. C. A. Schutte.

Mrs. Ella L. Davidson, of Fairmont, has been here to see her aged father, Jacob J. Lough, who is critically ill.

A big basketball game is advertised for Thursday night—Waynesburg, Pa., College against Salem College.
